modern methods histochemistry - the history of histochemistry it is not easy to write the history of a science which one of its chief exponents (lison, 1936) believes to have arisen de novo, and which many of its supporters consider an invention of the twentieth century. in spite of this we need not doubt that histochemistry began long before 1900, and, taking the subject of the chemistry of the tissues in its broadest sense, we ...
